Editor's Extras

Chris Aupperle, Editor

Enjoy part two of Mike Peters' Model A engine swap in this newsletter. Let's hear about your car adventures, repairs and restorations. Keep those engines running and those stories coming!

Please contact me if you are not getting your newsletter via email or postal delivery – we want to keep you in touch!

Members' Corner : Mike Peters' 1928 Model A Tudor

I've finished the engine swap, but not without some problems. The first time the engine was started, there was a nasty tappet noise. A broken valve guide was found in the intake port. So the cylinder head was pulled, the intake valve removed. It was bent. Sigh. (See 3rd photo) A good used valve and guide was found and installed back into the engine. This engine does not have adjustable valve lifters, so about .002" was ground off the end of the valve to get the required .013" clearance. A new head gasket was installed, and the engine started once again. The tappet noise was cured, but this time there were water leaks around the goose neck and also from the cylinder head on the drivers side directly above the engine number.

So off comes the cylinder head again, and upon inspection a crack in the cylinder head was found. (See 2nd photo) Also, the outer edge of the cylinder head was deeply undercut with rust pits. (See 1st photo) Also, the nearest head stud was loose. The loose stud was replaced with a better one with silicone sealer. The cylinder head was also replaced with another one without cracks and much less rust on the gasket mating surface. A new thin water outlet (goose neck) gasket was installed.

Add water and start engine. No water leaks. No noises. The only remaining snag is the heavy snow falling. I can't take it out for a drive. See you this season out on the road.

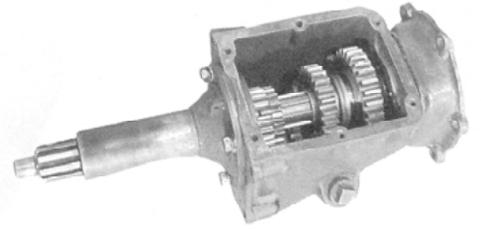

Regards,

Mike

Tech-Talk

Thanks, Jim Morley for the excellent hands-on, git-ya-hands-dirty transmission presentation! I know everyone went away better informed about how trannies work. Next time, I'd better bring more "Go-Jo" hand cleaner and rags!

Fashion Fun - Vintage Hair Styles

Thousands of women flocked to hairdressers to chop their inches away as "The Bob" became an ever-present symbol of bold, modern femininity. The original iconic bob hairstyle was made famous by Louise Brooks; a showgirl, actress and dancer during her heyday in the Twenties....The '20s were also known for tighter finger waves, firm pin-curls and uniform manicured strands or fuzzy soft waves of volume.... In the 1930's, curls and waves were all the rage. Some women opted for soft waves set close to the face, while others arranged their hair in tight pincurls. Finger waving and pin curling create smooth lines and voluptuous waves create the look of the 30's. Deep side parts allow a heavy wave section to sweep across the forehead.

Free Membership Program

As you may know, MAFCA is offering a year's free membership to Model A enthusiasts who are not MAFCA members. This program has been met with excitement throughout the world and so far has been very successful in introducing MAFCA to new members. But, there is some small confusion. This is being offered to people who have not been MAFCA members before. It is designed to encourage people interested in the Model A hobby to join our family. It is not meant to be used for renewals. The Board of Directors encourages the chapters to continue to provide these free applications to prospective members.

June 11 – 15, 2012

Most of the activities will be on the EAA Grounds where 80,000 people come daily to the annual aircraft convention from all over the world each summer. Pioneer Airport is a 1930's replica of era airports with grass runway, hangars, equipment and antique aircraft.

Small town environment, rural views, no expressways. Plus, Main Street, where portions of "public enemies" was filmed.

By: Jonathan Klinger reprinted courtesy of HagertyPlus, LLC, copyright 2012, www.hagerty.com

Motoring through the big cities proved to be less of a challenge than I originally anticipated, as I stuck with major secondary roads that paralleled major highways. I did have to remember to practice the "10-second rule" from drivers ed class in order to leave plenty of room between the Model A and the car in front. The few times a car ahead made a sudden move I had plenty of time to react despite the original mechanical brakes. I should probably remember this lesson regardless of the car I'm driving.

Throughout the year I only needed a tow truck twice. Both times were due to electrical issues, and I admit that I should have replaced the 81-year-old wiring harness for my yearlong adventure. The major issue I experienced was a crack in the engine block that caused coolant to leak into an exhaust port. While this crack was repairable, I swapped out a short block to get my primary source of transportation back on the road quickly.

The biggest highlight has been meeting people along the way who might otherwise have remained strangers. Seeing this car on the road in all types of weather gave them the chance to share their memories of how they (or their parents) had a similar Ford. I was also thrilled every time a young person would turn his or her head and say, "That's a cool old car!"

The experience taught me that it's OK to enjoy life in the slow lane. At least twice a day, I was forced away from computers, emails and telephones when I climbed into "The Mighty Model A" for my two-hands-on-the-wheel driving experience without radios, GPS, Bluetooth connectivity or any other electronic distraction. Within my mobile sanctuary, I could unwind and let my thoughts run uninterrupted. It was a wonderful part of the experience that I'll really miss.

Many people claim that the longer a trip takes, the worse it is. My back-road routes took me away from boring vanilla interstates and through some of the most interesting scenery and towns in the Midwest and East. By leaving the super-highways, I realized that each trip was as much about the journey as it was the final destination.

I hope my yearlong undertaking has proven that old cars deserve to be driven and enjoyed. I'm not out to advocate that people trade in their modern vehicles. However, occasionally stepping away from the demands of daily life is good for anyone, and one of the best ways to do that is in an old car.
